

PROJECT STATUS REPORT

Project Name Project Vitality

Blurb Studies show that malnutrition can be significantly prevented through implementing good breastfeeding practices from the start of a child's life up to two years and beyond. We want to create a progressive web app that allows community workers to keep track of the progress being made on the correct breastfeeding practices. The PWA will allow community workers to keep track of the progress of each mother and child through consistent questionnaires and comments that can be viewed in a graphical way to see the change in progress over time. Through tracking the progress in every community, we hope that it can help the community workers and supervisors make informed decisions on what is working and what is not, or request more resources if needed. Furthermore, the data collected through our PWA would help the United Nations in understanding how the information that is being taught on breastfeeding is being received and implemented through different communities all around the world.

For Week Ending March 16 – March 24
